How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 17, 1883.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against shocks than any other cases in the market. Bulwer Lytton's Bridge.

WHERE IT TOUCHES THE SHORES AND THE GREAT COLUMNS IN MIDSTREAM.

"What a beautiful bridge between old age and childhood is religion. How intuitively the child begins with prayer and worship on entering life, and now intuitively, on quitting life, the old man turns back to prayer and worship, putting himself again side by side with the infant," remarks Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, in his "Strange Story."

Yes but between its distant abutments the bridge of life has many high and awful arches, through which the wild waters dash and roar in wrath and disolution. Prayer and worship alone do not sustain these. Nature's solid rocks must lie unshaken beneath, and human art and skill must rear and solidify the structure overhead. God's will is best exemplified in the laws He has made for the creatures whom He has placed under their control. Neither the child's trustful "our Father," nor the old man's "F orget me not in the midst of mine infirmities," will alter this by the weight of a single grain.

Science and art first—then faith and prayer—is the order of Heaven itself. Divinity heals through its agents, and those agents are the discoveries of man; not the vague announcements of prophets or seers. Is life a burden to you? Does time drag? Is your power to cope with life's problem and duties weakened? You are not well. Your blood is sluggish and tainted, perhaps; or some important organ is torpid or overworked. This fact may have taken the form of dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, malaria, pains in the stomach, chronic headache, or any of a dozen other ills. PARKER'S TONIC will invigorate you, as fresh air invigorates those who have been shut up in damp, fetid cells. It is powerful, pure, delicious, scientific, safe—the keystone of the central arch of the bridge of life.

SELECT STORY.

THE MEEK FAMILY.

I don't know what I had done to merit the spite of fortune which led me to No. 132 Peckover street in search of lodgings.

Were the apartments dingy? Decidedly so. The paper was of a very trying pattern—in two drabs; the carpet rather more trying in yellows and browns, with this advantage, that its pattern was almost worn threadbare and pleasantly effaced. The window drapery was of similar hue to the paper, and muslin curtains, drawn partially across, had been reduced by dust and smoke to the same subdued color.

There were one or two striking portraits (family ones, probably,) on the walls, and a yet more striking fire-stove ornament in the grate. I forget further details.

The landlady was elderly and limp, with a sort of washed out and plaintiff aspect and a tendency to sigh and fold her hands. She was very attentive, however, and anxious to show her "first floor" to the best advantage.

"The curtains will wash," said I, looking around.

"Dear, yes, sir, surely! We was lettin' 'em hang to save the others, which the sun fades 'em so, being the worst of stuffs and such like. Like all earthly things, as fade mostly, don't they sir?"

The landlady sighed gently and folded her hands again. She wore black worsted mittens.

"I hope," I said, in my polite way, "you don't mind my naming it—but, of course—you—ahem—the—bed—is free, you know—from—from any little annoyances?"—

I had my experience—preceding those three years of paradise and Mrs. Chick, and I was nervous, partly from dread of the indignation I had before aroused in the housekeeping breast by the above delicate question and partly from the recollection of results that had followed on the assurance of land ladies of another class that their knowledge of natural history did not extend to the species alluded to, and that they were at fault to comprehend my meaning.

Mrs. Maudle (that was her name) adopted neither of these extremes; she only shook her head pensively and said:

"To my knowledge there ain't a living flea in the house;" (I didn't mean fleas, though), "but you know, sir, we live in a vale of tears, and in course there will be such trials for all at times. If I am so tired, I hope to bear it meekly."

And I think Mrs. Maudle shed a tear.

"I am very glad to hear it, said I cheerfully; "now about terms, if I arrange to come."

"Oh, don't speak of terms, sir; I'm sure what you've been in the habit of paying will suit us, or less, maybe, as it's more for the keepin' of the rooms aired, bein' as the house is too big for us, and the protection of havin' a gent like yourself under our roof, Maudle bein' low in the nerves of late years and myself haven't that sperret as some have, which I'm sure, sir, anything we can do to make you comfortable and feel at home, as there's no place like it—"

"Ah! thank you—thank you."

The light—when the windows were cleaned—would suit my work, the exchequer was somewhat low, time was an object, and, taking all in all, I closed with my obliging landlady's terms, which gave her much pensive satisfaction.

"And if you'll be pleased to name your wishes, sir, in all respects," said Mrs. Maudle with a faint sigh in conclusion, "we hope to do our humble best to meet 'em."

"You are very good," said I; "I don't think you'll find me exacting; I confess to a few weaknesses. I dislike damp salt and smoky potatoes. I object to a hot dinner on a cold plate, and I'm partial to clean linen. That's about all, I think."

Mrs. Maudle readily acquiesced in these modest requirements, observing that "a hangel couldn't want less," and thereupon we parted.

In due time myself and my few belongings were conveyed in a cab to 123 Peckover street. I had dined, and beyond a cup of coffee, wanted nothing. Mrs. Maudle brought me the coffee herself.

"I'm sure, sir, I hope its as you like," said she, meekly; "but, if not, you'll kindly name it, and Sophonisba Ann will bring you your water at any hour you'll mention in the mornin', sir. Sophonisba Ann mostly waits on lodgers, sir (that's my daughter), and I'm sure always willin', though that timid and soft-hearted—but there! don't mind me, a sayin', as a mother, perhaps more than I had ought respetin' my own."

I said I was much obliged to her and her daughter for their kind intentions and wished her good night. She sighed audibly and held the door handle for another minute, then, with an air of resignation, retired.

Morning brought breakfast and Sophonisba Ann. This young person was, if possible, meeker and more depressed than her parent. She carried her head a little on one side, and sniffed with every breath as if from chronic influenza. Her complexion was pale, not to say pasty, and her hair and eyebrows whitish-brown. Sophonisba Ann's figure was remarkable for depression where fullness might be expected and a curious bulging tendency wherever the opposite effect was usual. Her attire was chiefly notable for hooks and eyes—with a difference of opinion that materially hindered friendship, and refractory hair pins, which I found had a way of dropping out into all sorts of odd places. I found one, one day, at the bottom of my jug of porter at dinner!

This interesting young person contrived to make a surprising clatter with the breakfast ware, upset a chair and throw down a pile of my books before making her exit. I attributed this to the timidity which her mother had assured me was counterbalanced by so many virtues, and could not, in reason, complain; but when, in removing the breakfast things, the same pile of books underwent precisely the same fate, and gave me such a start that I nearly cut off a finger in mending a pen, I could not help saying rather brusquely, "For heaven's sake, my good girl, be careful what you do next," which produced quite an attack of sniffing and a hasty retreat on the part of the unlucky maiden.

A little later in the day, my landlady knocked timidly at my door.

"Come in!" said I.

She came in, folding her hands and looking up at the ceiling.

"I'm sure, sir, you'll excuse it, though a liberty, but as I'm a mother, which it's nothing after all, and I've no call to worrit, I'm certain, but it's my daughter, sir, a takin' on so after you spoke to her this mornin' and if you'd be so very kind, seein' as Sophonisba Ann is so tender-hearted—"

"What is it about?" I said, as the tearful lady paused to take breath, "I don't understand."

"Oh! and I am sure you didn't mean for to hurt her feelin's, sir, and she owns it; she's said as much in that kitchen down below me. 'His way seemed harsh,' she says, 'but his heart's in the right place,' she says; 'I'm certain sure of it,' she says, and she's been a-cryin' her eyes out, which Sophonisba Ann is rather 'sterical at times, sir; and I'm a mother, with, I hope, a mother's feelins, as you'll excuse; but there, don't mind me, sir. I tell her I'm sure you don't mean nothing, and likely it won't so occur again."

"Bless me!" said I, "this is very foolish; of course I didn't mean to hurt your daughter's feelings, ma,am; pray tell her so; I'll remember to speak less abruptly since you've named it."

She almost wept at this.

"Oh! sir, you're the most feelin' gent as ever I did see, I'm sure. I don't know whatever my gurl'll say—and the last gent we had so different—so violent in his language; not to speak of banging the door. O dear! what it is to have a sperrit, which is what me and mine never had; and so the world tramples on us," said Mrs. Maudle.

"I hope not," said I. "You should take a more cheerful view of life, Mrs. Maudle."

I was very busy, and wished she would go, but she didn't.

"Well, sir," she observed, with a sigh, "I always was one of the downhearted ones; and Maudle's nerves that low! I never shall forget when he asted me to have him—that's seven-and-twenty-year ago—'Marian,' he says to me (that's my name)—"but there, sir, don't mind me, which as a wife I hope I have a wife's feelin's;" and Mrs. Maudle shed tears.

I did mind her very much and devoutly wished her at the North Pole, as she stood in the doorway wiping her eyes with her apron, and evidently awaiting my sympathy.

"I'm sure Mr Maudle's choice does him credit," I said desperately, "he couldn't have done better than take a good wife to sooth the path of life for him; wasn't that your door bell?"

"Sophonisba Ann will answer the door, sir, which I think you was mistaken, and it didn't ring," said Mrs. Maudle. "I'm sure I never did meet with a gentleman so thoughtful and feelin'; a real friend, as one may say, already, and I'm only thankful—"

"I'm afraid I must trouble you to shut that door, Mrs. Maudle," I gasped. "I'm subject to ear-ache, and the draught"—I hope I shall be forgiven for the fibs that woman caused me to invent. She slowly withdrew, murmuring motherly compassion, and faintly suggested pepper plasters, and other mild remedies for ear ache, while I took up my pen and tried to collect my scattered ideas.

I had not yet seen Mr. Maudle, the state of whose "nerves" kept him mostly confined to an armchair in the kitchen, but from occasional sounds of melody, something like feebly rendered choruses of a jovial nature, in which a slight confusion of consonants was perceptible, I concluded that even Mr. M. had intervals of comparative cheerfulness. Moreover, I discovered that there was a son of the house—a tall youth with whitish-brown hair and skin and a stoop in his shoulders—whose avocation seemed to be near at hand, by his punctual return to meals at stated hours in the day. With this young man I was fated, alas! too soon to become acquainted.

One evening, a little before my dinner, Mrs. Maudle waited on me with an air of meek mystery to ask if her son might "step up by-and-by" and speak to me, if so be that I had no objection.

His name, his mother told me, was Cincinnatus; he was rather low spirited, and had, in fact, something on his mind.

"Dear me!" I said, "poor fellow! any trouble? Nothing serious, I hope?"

"Oh, dear, no, sir—leastwise, nothing wrong. Cin's as innocent as the babe unborn, as to evil ways, sir; no, it's the mind, that's where it is;" (mysteriously) "he's got a soaria mind, sir, and the world's too little for him."

"Indeed?" said I, mentally regretting that the young gentleman had selected me as the confidant of his mental trials; but, alas! I little guessed what was to come. Scarcely was the cloth removed when a modest rap announced my new acquaintance, and Cincinnatus entered, bearing a huge brown paper parcel, which he deposited with a jerk on the table, violently shaking back a long wisp of hair which kept falling rebelliously into his eyes, and sinking immediately into the first chair near, with an air of profound dejection.

This young man had a large nose of the solid Roman type, very red eyelids, and a sonorous voice with a twang in it. He told me he was in an attorney's office, but that the work was very distasteful to him, and he had thoughts of giving it up and turning author.

He had begun several works of importance, one of which (his "chef d'ouvre" he called it) he had brought up with him.

"Blank verse, mostly, sir," he explained; "in ten books, revealing the mysteries of a human soul to the moon, who is supposed to be listening—poetical license, of course—you understand. The first three books—"

"Isn't it a risk," interrupted I, shrinking from the prospect of being pressed into the same service as the moon, and resolved to be as practical as possible, "isn't it a risk to give up steady work for an uncertainty like literature?"

"Well, sir, mother talks like that, and she's right, and you're right, in one point of view," said the youth, meekly; "but when you've a soul, and when your soul mounts beyond the office stool, where are you then?"

He waved his hand descriptively, as it were, of an aerial flight; his nails were inky, and very long.

"Well, I don't know," said I, "but hadn't you better—?"

But he had risen, and hurriedly commenced undoing the brown paper, withdrawing from it about fifty sheets of foolscap, well written over.

"Listen!" he cried oracularly, and slowly recited as follows:

Hail! cold, unfeeling orb, tho' thy bright ray
Mocks the absorbing madness of my soul!
Soon, soon thy last quarter will draw nigh;
But sooner still for me the funeral bell shall toll!

"That's the opening lines," said he; "the next—"

"My friend," I said, "I am afraid you will find the public hard to satisfy; you must look for disappointment."

"That's all I look for, sir," he interrupted, "that and an early grave," he added, with a certain air of satisfaction. "And as mother and father aren't as well off as they were, I dare say there won't even be a recordin' marble to tell the world Cincinnatus Maudle lies below—but that's of no consequence."

He sighed.

"Aren't you a little out of health?" I asked at this point.

"Oh, yes, sir," he smiled. "I'm journeying to the tomb. I've no sort of doubt about it myself, but the cold world will pass heedless by and think nothing of it. The world's so very sublunary! Don't you find it so, sir?"

"Well, yes; I suppose it is that," I said, never having had cause to doubt it as a fact. "Yes, I suppose it is. But now let me advise you as a friend."

He looked up softly.

"I knew you would," he cried; "that's just it, you will assist me, and I'll step up of evenings and we'll go through it together gradual like. Yes, I felt sure you'd be the friend to do it; when mother said, 'Cin, that's our first floor going out,' I felt as if I could open my heart to you like a brother; I did indeed, sir."

"Look here," I said, when he paused and shook back the excited wisp of whitish-brown hair, with joyful vehemence; "look here, I'll let you know when to bring it up. The fact is, I'm awfully busy just now; I haven't a minute to spare for study or the delights of the muse."

I smiled grimly as I almost pushed him out of the door, bearing his precious brown paper parcel and overwhelming me with undeserved thanks. Inwardly I resolved never to have five minutes' leisure to listen to those "revelations to the moon" which would henceforth haunt my waking and sleeping hours, even should the meek Cincinnatus sink into his early grave the sooner for lack of brotherly sympathy.

The next morning when I entered my sitting room Sophonisba Ann was there, a little belated, I concluded, as she was finishing the operation of dusting, which I never observed to produce much result. Something in the street had caught the damsel's notice, for she did not observe my entrance, as she stood with her hands on her hips, the duster hanging idly by her side, her mouth open, and vacantly fixed eyes; the refractory hairpins in open rebellion, and stray wisps and tails of hair obtruding where they were off duty; while hooks and eyes at variance completed the effect of the bulgy lines of Sophonisba Ann's figure before hinted at.

Now it happened that I was engaged in making a series of sketches for a comic journal, and Sophonisba Ann, as she now stood, was the very model I wanted for one of them. The opportunity was too good to be lost. I seized paper and pencil.

"One moment, my good girl!" I cried. "Stay as you are; oblige me by not moving."

Of course she did not stay "as she was," but nearly enough so to enable me to throw on paper the outline which had caught my fancy.

"Thanks—that will do," I said as blandly as I could.

She simpered and actually forgot to sniffle.

"La, sir! whatever could you take me like this for?" she cried at last. "If I'd only been in my afternoon frock at least, and done my hair up a bit tidy—if you had told me; but la! now."

"Don't name it," I said; "I'd rather not, in fact. I wanted you just as you are."

The next evening Mrs. Maudle came up smiling—yes, actually smiling!—with a cheerful serenity, if not a little excitement in her demeanor, as she placed before me a photographic likeness of Sophonisba Ann.

"Which Maudle and me, sor, couldn't bear of your puttin' up with such a sketch like, all of a hurry; and bein' as our gurl wasn't tidied up, as she'd a wished, in course, Sophonisba Ann's been and had this took at Mr. Daubley's, round the corner, if you'll accept it; and I'm sure a good-hearted, well-disposed gurl is my gurl, though I say it, and not took up with follies like some, and that steady, almost too steady for her station in life, as her father tells her; and I'm sure both her father and me—but there, sir, when you're a parent you'll know what a parent's feelin's are."

All this was said in one breath, without any pause whatever. I sat bewildered, wondering if it would be unpardonably rude to reject the offer of a lady's portrait, and what I could say in excuse.

"I'm afraid," I began, "you're very kind—the fact is—I think I didn't make myself quite understood."

"Oh, yes, sir, you did. Pray don't name. You was all a gentleman should be; and Maudle and me are too proud"—here Mrs. Maudle, without proceeding further, conveyed herself down stairs, in a tremulous condition between tears and smiles that fairly stunned me. What could the stupid people think I wanted with their daughter's likeness? I stuck it on the

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1884.

Blaine seems to be loosing ground. The delegate elections of Wednesday were nearly all for Arthur, from Vermont to Iowa.

The Phila. Times of Sunday gives an estimate of the probable vote at the Republican National Convention on first ballot as follows: Arthur about 304, Blaine 255, Edmunds 68, Logan 36, Sherman 37, Harrison 26, Fairchild 18, Sabin 14, Hawley 12. The largest vote Blaine ever received was in 1876, when he had 351.

Senator Edmunds has opened a sharp correspondence with William Walter Phelps of New Jersey who attempted to defend Blaine by saying he was not as bad a man as Edmunds. Edmunds appears to admit the charges brought against him, but is indignant that he should be classed with Blaine. These two statesmen seem to be determined that neither shall obtain the nomination for president.

The miners at points along the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys have issued an address, in which they say: "Our families are suffering for the real necessaries of life, which we are unable to give them at the present rate of wages. We were promised full time a few weeks since, but a week's suspension has come instead. It will be utterly impossible for us to endure this state of affairs much longer. We have kept still for weeks—and months—in hope that the spring would bring us better times. Fellow-workmen along the line, get yourselves in shape, for the more you humble yourselves, and the stiller you keep, the more will the companies try to crush you down."

A Chance for Sherman.

At the republican primaries at Louisville, Kentucky, on Monday night, the fight between the Arther and Blaine factions culminated in a terrible riot at which a number of persons were shot and stabbed.

Here is another chance for John Sherman. Let him at once proceed to investigate this bloody republican riot. He may be able to discredit both Arthur and Blaine and thus give new freshness and vigor to his own presidential boom.

Such an investigation would not be attended with the difficulties that surrounded the Danville affair. It will require no Eliza Pinkston or Violet Keeling to perjure herself in order to make out a case for Mr. Sherman at Louisville. The Arthur and Blaine factions are so intent upon bringing confusion to each other that a cloud of witnesses will be ready to testify on either side.

Let Ohio's favorite son once more unfurl the faded folds of the bloody shirt and "move on the enemy's works" at Louisville.—Patriot.

Bankruptcy.

A new bankruptcy bill passed the Senate last week. It makes the United States District Courts bankruptcy courts, and allows of appeal to the Circuit Courts, the Supreme Court of the United States to review decisions only when the Circuit Judges disagree. The Circuit Courts will appoint Commissioners in Bankruptcy, and a Supervisor in each judicial district. Any person owing debts exceeding $300, and unable to pay, may apply to be adjudicated bankrupt. Any person owing debts exceeding $1,000, who leaves his State to avoid his creditors, or conceals himself to avoid arrest, or service of legal process, or makes fraudulent transfer of his property, or suspends payment of his commercial paper or open accounts for thirty days after the same are due and payable, or who makes fraudulent preference, shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy, and may be adjudged bankrupt on petition of three or more of his creditors whose bills would amount in all to $500.

Women and the Ballot.

CONGRESSMEN EXPRESSING DIVERGENT VIEWS ON THE QUESTION OF SUFFRAGE.

The House committee on the judiciary last week submitted four reports relative to extending the right of suffrage to women. The adverse majority report was prepared by Representative Maybury and says in part: "To permit the entrance of political contention into a home would be either useless or pernicious—useless if man and wife agree and pernicious if they differ. In the former event the volume of ballots alone would be increased without changing results. In the latter the peace and contentment of home would be exchanged for the bedlam of political debate and become the scene of base and demoralizing intrigue. * * * In answer to the question often suggested what portion and what class of women would avail themselves of the privilege of suffrage if extended to women, your committee is of the opinion that while a few intelligent women, such as appeared before the committee in advocacy of the pending measure, would defy all obstacles in the way of their casting the ballot, yet the great mass of the intelligent, refined and judicious, with the becoming modesty of their sex, would shrink from the rude contact of the crowd, with the exceptions meationed, leaving to the ignorant and vilest the exclusive right to speak for the gentler sex in public affairs."

Messrs. Reed, E. B. Taylor, T. M. Browne and McCoid in their minority report say: "The association of the sexes in the family circle, in society and in business having proved improving to both, there is neither history, reason nor sense to justify the assertion that association in politics will lower the one or demoralize the other."

Mr. Dorsheimer, while concurring with the majority in recommending that the matter be laid on the table, says: "I think it probable that the interest of society will soon require that woman should have the right of suffrage." Mr. Poland's report says: "The office and duty which nature had devolved upon woman during all the active and vigorous portion of her life would often render it impossible and still more indelicate for her to appear and act in caucuses, conventions or elections, or to act as a member of a Legislature or as a juror or Judge."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

A large number of Hungarians have withdrawn their earnings from the Savings Deposit Bank in Wilkes-Barre with the purpose of returning to their native land. Within the past few years these people have shown up well on the books of the different banks, being of a very saving disposition. Half time at the mines and persecution by the native laborers have disheartened them, hence their return to the old country.

Thomas J. Thomas, who formerly resided in Pittston, but is now living in Cardiff, Wales, writes to his friend, Isaac E. James, of the former place, saying: "The coal trade here is quite the reverse from what it is reported in America. A working man now gets plenty to do, and a fair day's wages for a fair day's work." With the prospect of only half time in the mines for the coming year their own country seems to offer a better prospect for Welsh miners than can be expected this side of the Atlantic.

One hundred men were discharged from Baldwin's locomotive works recently and one of the members of the firm said that unless other work came in the discharging would continue until the present working force of 3,000 would be reduced to about 2,000 men. The works have been running to their full capacity for several years past and average 550 locomotives a year. The cause of the falling off in orders the gentleman said, was that, the railroads have been carrying freight and passengers at such low rates that they are compelled to reduce their expenses and one of the first places in which to retrench is the motive power. The trunk lines, he said, have now stopped cutting each others' throats, and he thought that when the fall carrying trade begins there will be plenty of work.

ITEMS.

Gold has been discovered in large quantities near Thompson's Falls, Montana.

The late name given the supporters of Blaine, is that of "Mulligan Guards." The name is very appropriate.

A terrific cyclone passed through Ohio, near Dayton, on Sunday afternoon, causing much destruction of property and loss of life. The path of the cyclone was about an eighth of a mile wide.

The Hungarians were brought into this country by coal operators and railroad companies, because they would work at a much lower price than native laborers. Now the native laborers are making war upon these foreigners because of their doing the same work at lower wages. The Hungarians should not be permitted to be thus treated, but let the blame rest upon the heads of those who brought them here.

The Memphis Medical Monthly says that the Missouri Supreme Court has decided that information obtained by a physician from a patient must not be disclosed on the witness stand, where information was necessary to enable the doctor to prescribe as a physician or operate as a surgeon. The Court held that it would not do, while the mouth of a physician is closed as to the actual spoken words of a patient, to open it as to knowledge acquired from his diagnosis.

A bill has been passed and signed by the Governor of New York which provides that "no person shall manufacture out of oleaginous substance or substances, or any compound of the same, other than that produced from unadulterated milk, or cream of the same, any article designed to take the place of butter or cheese produced from pure, unadulterated milk or cream of the same, or shall sell, or offer for sale, the same as an article of food." The penalty is a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment. The commissioner is to receive $3,000, and the sum of $30,000 is placed at his disposal to be used in enforcing the law. The section containing this prohibition is a copy of a section of the Missouri law, the validity of which has been tested in the federal courts.

Attorney General Cassidy has given an opinion that Common Pleas Judges who were commissioned subsequent to the approval of the act of 1883, providing that no Judge of the Courts of Common Pleas hereafter appointed or elected and commissioned shall receive any compensation in addition to the salary and mileage fixed by the act, are not entitled to extra compensation for holding court in counties outside their district. Under the act of 1871 provision is made for the payment of $12 a day to Judges who hold such courts. The Attorney General maintains that the act of 1883 repeals that of 1871 so far as the compensation of Judges appointed after approval of the former act is concerned. The opinion of the Attorney General was written in reply to a letter by Auditor General Lemon, on whom a claim was made by Judge Seeley, President Judge of Wayne and Pike counties, for $144 for holding court in the Thirty-fourth and Forty fifth Judicial districts during February last.

BOSSES—CHEAP NEWSPAPERS.

The ego in man's nature is sometimes a healthy factor in the development of personal character in that self-respect is often thereby induced, but where egotism becomes arrogance and manifests an overbearing or intolerant disposition, discord and dissension are its legitimate results. The President is not the republic, a preacher is not the church he ministers to, the chief officer of a town council is not the body corporate, the chairman of a political committee is not the entire party, and yet we frequently find persons filling these and similar positions acting as though they were the aggregate instead of being units in such organizations.

We know of ridiculous attempts of men who, blinded by a little temporary authority or official power, seek to manipulate matters—social, religious, political or municipal—to their own personal advantage. Now, this is wrong: the public expect to have leaders, but have no use for dictators, and when such officials or dignitaries forget that they are the servants of the people they are apt to come to grief. "Man, dressed in a little brief authority, like an angry ape, plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven as makes the angels weep." Dogberryism is not dead by any means, and the old saying that if you "set a beggar on horseback he will ride to the devil," is a very true one.

Officious gentlemen who lack modesty to understand when they become offensive to communities by their overbearing insolence, sooner or later accomplish their own destruction; and when once deposed they sink into that insignificance and obscurity from which they never ought to have been boosted by unwise, though probably well-meaning friends.

There seems to be a mania for cheap, trashy newspapers—the more sensational and purile the contents, the more acceptable they appear to be. Do people ever stop to think of the drift or tendency of such reading, and its effects on the home circle?

The exploits of noted robbers, murderers and bank defaulters, the developments of frailty and depravity in human nature, the natural cussedness demonstrated by bad boy predilections—all such matters seem to absorb and fascinate a large number of newspaper readers. That this is an unhealthy condition of things none will doubt, and it will require a vigorous effort on part of society to condemn in order to suppress it; but we incline to think if local newspapers would show a more progressive and enterprising disposition and would furnish their readers with good, newsy and interesting matter these extraneous excrescences would not be so welcome. When local newspapers can only offer their weekly readers about five minutes' local news, and then fill up their columns with insipid clippings and patent outside absurdities, it is not wonderful that the majority of people seek for novelty elsewhere.

The publishers of the COLUMBIAN have always issued a clean sheet, and will never offer to its readers objectionable reading, and it intends in the future to extend its usefulness in the county by increased effort in its local state and national budgets. During the present year more than usual interest attaches to political and social developments, and the COLUMBIAN means to give to its subscribers the best dollar and a half's worth of news to be got in this part of the country.

Chronic Catarrh

HAY-FEVER

The result of 25 years' catarrh;—the bridge, or division of my nose, was about half gone. I obtained a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm; have used four bottles, applying it to the affected parts with a swab, which has about cured up the nostrils. I had previously tried all other remedies on the market without permanent relief.—J. A. Wood, M.N. Digest, Columbus, Ohio.

Ely's Cream Balm causes no pain. Gives relief at once. Cleanses the head. Causes healthy secretions. Abates inflammation. Prevents fresh colds. Heals the sores. Restores the senses of taste and smell. A thorough treatment will cure. Not a liquid or snuff. Applied with the finger. Send for circular. Sold by druggists. Mailed for 50c. Notice to Correspondents.

In order to save many communications from the waste basket we make the following suggestions to local correspondents: Use only one side of the sheet, and write as plain as possible; give only the local news that is of some interest to the community, such as accidents, improvements, marriages, deaths, matter relating to schools and churches, business enterprises, changes of residence, and the like. What appear to be jokes at the expense of others, and personal mention giving only one name or initials or a nickname, will not be printed under any circumstances. Such items often give offense, though none may be intended. The full name of the writer must always be given, but will not be printed unless requested. tf

Governor Pattison appointed L. B. Rupert Justice of the Peace to fill the unexpired term caused by the death of T. J. Morris of this place.

From our exchanges we learn that Wilson S. Heller, a young merchant of Wapwallopen, has suddenly disappeared. Since his departure it has been learned that he forged the name of Samuel Heller, his father, to the extent of $4,000. Heller's store is closed and he leaves an estimable young wife.

This is the season of the year when the agent delivers his trees, shrubs and roses. The purchaser must wait until the plant blossoms to know if their white rose is pink or scarlet. The best plan to pursue is to buy your roses, &c., at home, where you know what you are getting, besides you can get them at less than half price paid foreign nurserymen.

Largest stock of wall paper in the county, at G. A. Clark's.

Lilley & Sleppy have over one hundred different styles of wall paper.

Rev. N. S. Buckingham, a former pastor in the M. E. church of this place, and afterwards presiding elder in the Danville district, died at his late residence in Lewisburg, on Sunday last, of pneumonia, aged about sixty years. He attended the methodist Conference held at Williamsport in March, and was appointed to the Lewisburg charge. He was born in Montgomery county, Virginia.

E. E. Moyer and S. D. Boone, purchased the drug store in Mt. Carmel belonging to the late A. D. Allen, on Friday last and took immediate possession. E. E. Moyer has just graduated from the Maryland college of Pharmacy. He has had considerable experience with his uncle's large wholesale establishment in this place, and will undoubtedly make a success of it in Mt. Carmel, which is now a fast growing town.

Shenandoah has a few cases of small pox which are yet confined to three houses, and every effort is being made to prevent its spread. The Board of Health has secured the services of Dr. Schodel and have guaranteed him a salary of $500 a month for three months. A building has been erected about half a mile from the town where all patients will be conveyed should the disease spread. It is thought the disease will be held within the three families now afflicted.

At the late meeting of the Presbytery of Northumberland the Briar Creek church was added to the pastoral charge of Rev. C. K. Canfield of Orangeville. The installation service took place on the 27th ult., conducted by Rev. Messrs. D. J. Waller, N. Spear and Stuart Mitchell of Bloomsburg, and Rev. L. M. Kumler of Berwick. The large and attentive congregation seemed to indicate that this old mother church was renewing her youth, and would prolong and increase her usefulness.

Arrangements were completed on Friday last, April 25th, by which a through mail is now carried on the 6:27 evening train to Wilkesbarre, and from there becomes a distributing mail. Letters mailed at 6 p. m., will reach New York and Philadelphia, as early as if mailed at 4 o'clock. Our New York and Philadelphia mails received at five p. m., may be answered at six. There is likewise a closed mail from Wilkesbarre to this place at 11:52; and also one from here to Harrisburg on the same train. An effort was made by Mr. Beckley about a year ago to have this additional mail, but it was not accomplished until this time.

Governor Pattison has recently made a number of changes in the Board of Trustees of the Miners' Hospital at Ashland. Daniel Miller, a coal operator of Pine Grove, has been superceded by Richard Flynn, a miner of Ashland. John Wagner, another miner of Ashland, has been appointed in the place of Emanuel Bast, another retired coal operator. A. P. Blakeslie, of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, will act instead of Thomas J. Foster, of Shenandoah. Simon Cameron has also tendered his resignation and it is reported that another member of the old board will follow suit. The action of Governor Pattison in appointing workingmen on the board has received the approval of all the citizens of the anthracite regions.

Go to G. A. Clark's for your wall paper, and you cannot fail to be suited.

Potatoes are scarce. Lilley & Sleppy don't want any, but any other kind of produce they will take.

A fire broke out at Selinsgrove on Sunday evening just as people were returning from church. The fire was first discovered in the stable of T. J. Schoch, from thence to Schoch & Bros'. warehouse (of which firm our townsman A. Z. Schoch is a member). A strong wind blew the flames and all the buildings between Pine and Pleasant streets were consumed, in all about twenty. The entire loss is estimated from $15,000 to $25,000, partly insured. The fire was no doubt the work of an incendiary, as the bell rope leading to the fire alarm was cut, which delayed giving people notice. Many robberies were committed during the fire.

Lilley & Sleppy at Orangeville, have the largest stock of glit, mica, satin, white, black and brown back wall paper ever offered for sale in Orangeville.

A new Ithaca five octave organ will be exchanged for a buggy. Inquire at this office.

The annual meeting of the members of the Columbia County Agricultural Society for the election of officers for the ensuing year, will be held in the opera house at Bloomsburg, on Saturday, May 17, 1884, at two o'clock, p. m.

In a paper read before the Edinburgh Health Society, Dr. Almond referred to the custom of having the head covered out of doors and uncovered within doors as very injurious on account of its making people so sensitive to draughts of air as to cause them to take cold. Boys, he said, who went bareheaded out of doors could stand a greater amount of ventillation in schoolrooms and sleeping rooms than those who wore head coverings.

Orange Judd, Editor of the American Agriculturist for some forty years, but unconnected with its business management for a year or two past, has lately retired from its editorial department and located in the West. He desires to gather a complete "Postal-Card Album" of his old readers and friends, and requests them all to send him now a Postal giving their present location and address, naming also, when convenient, the years in which they were his subscribers. Mr. Judd's address is Chicago, Illinois.

Lilley & Sleppy's low prices are playing smash. Low prices are doing it.

Espy.

Rev. E. A. Sharretts has his house about completed.

Mr. H. Bomboy is erecting a building on Second street, for the purpose of making harness.

The band turned out and serenaded the town on Tuesday evening for the first time this season.

Spring is here at last, and the people are all busy making garden CHARLIE.

Electric Light.

A charter has been granted a stock company in Ashland for the purpose of introducing electric light in that place.

The citizens of Towanda held a meeting last week and appointed a committee to visit neighboring cities and examine the Edison light, preparatory to introducing it in that place.

There was some talk of organizing a similar company in this place about a year ago, but it ended in talk. Since that time the surrounding towns have introduced electric light with much satisfaction, and we remain content with the use of gas.

Berwick.

G. W. Mauger is doing well keeping hotel at Wapwallopen.

Fred. Boyer occupies the old stand of G. W. Mauger here; he has renovated the house, with good prospects of success.

The Berwick Bridge Company have been at considerable expense in repairing, and have built a nice home for Mr. Savidge, the toll gate keeper, which is a fine appreciation of efficient services. Mr. Savidge is winning golden opinions as gate keeper. A more popular man has not been in this line of service in Berwick for years.

Our librarian, Kimberly, has left the library. We are sorry for his loss.

Another Hoax.

A sensational article appeared in the Philadelpeia Press last week with a conspicuous heading of divorce and murder. It represented James Grubb and Miss Fanny May as having been married about four years ago and two years after leaving for Chicago, where a quarrel arose and on account of the loose divorce laws of Illinois they separated and his wife returned to Laporte. Grubb remained in Chicago until about a month ago when he returned and found his wife being visited by a young man named Silligan. This angered him and he took the life of Silligan with a revolver. Immediately after the shot a crowd of men and boys standing outside the room rushed for Grubb who immediately closed the door, and to save punishment from the crowd took his own life by plunging a penknife in the region of the heart. This has proven to be another hoax like the one given in the same paper about a month ago in reference to a murder at Coles' Creek. The people about Laporte are indignant that they should be so misrepresented. If our daily papers must give space to such items, let them confine themselves to the truth.

Centre.

The farmers have finished sowing their oats and are now preparing for corn.

Miss Sadie M. Hagenbuch is teaching school at Lime Ridge, and reports a good attendance.

Miss Lizzie Creasy is visiting friends at Wilkesbarre.

Mr. J. S. Hagenbuch has his barn finished. It adds greatly to the appearance of the former building.

Mr. Wm. Scott has begun the building of a barn.

Messrs. Noah Stiner and Henry Remley are building a house.

Mr. Tilman Keenly, or better known as "The Old Saddler," is back to Centre again.

Rev. Canfield was installed as pastor of the Presbyterian congregation at the Hidlay church on Sunday last.

We have not learned the name of the visitor at G. W. Remley's, therefore we report anon.

The Sunday school at Fowleraville has not been organized yet.

Rev. Bodine will hold his communion services at the Hidlay church on Sunday next.

That Light Street "posse" or correspondent to the Republican, under the assumed name of "Mexican Joe," goes on to write about an item which they claim to be written verbatim to one in the Sunday News Dealer. Now, Mr. Correspondent, if you know what the word verbatim means and then compare the papers you will find yourself to be wrong in what you have been trying to make the public believe to be right. Henry Clay said, "I would rather be right than be president." M. L. K. being the leader of this trio, I would not advise you to come before the public in the form of a newspaper correspondent to make a display of something of which you have no knowledge. If this is your game, go where you are not known so well as here. You have so bothered your mind that you must call in two assistants to help you on in your ignorance. You being troubled with "brain fever" to quite an extent I would advise you to take a trip down the canal and return with as good health as you did once before, then I think you can "go it." ENTRE NOUS.

Our complete stock of wall paper is proving a drawing card. Observers wondered what we were going to do with it when it was brought to us by wagon loads, but we have sold it so fast we were obliged to order again and have another invoice on the way. Call and we promise to please you. LILLEY & SLEPPY

Millin.

S. F. Deibert the artist is still doing a good business. He is being well patronized.

The wheat crop in our township promises to be very good, but April showed May but few rye heads.

Miss Carrie Wayne of Bloomsburg has been visiting a short time with her sister Mrs. Clark Milller of this place.

S. M. Hetler received another car load of phosphate on Friday.

A cave-in at the Shannon grist and sawmill has stopped both for some time. It will cost a great deal to repair it.

Miss Clara Croll spent Sunday with her parents at Mountain Grove.

Miss Nettie Stiles of Bloomsburg is starting a class in instrumental music at this place.

The prospects for coal on the Nescopeck mountain at this place seem better now than ever before.

While H. C. Barton's two teams were going from this place toward the Lime Ridge ferry on Friday, the front team driven by Mr. Frederick became frightened by a passenger train they ran toward the crossing arriving there just as the train was passing. The tongue struck the steps of the baggage car which broke it off and threw the team or one horse against the cars each one rubbing and bruising the horses and throwing them in a ditch. Fortunately they escaped but slightly injured. Certainly a narrow escape. Mr. Frederick remained on the wagon and did all he could to check them.

Everybody says Lilley & Sleppy are selling goods cheaper than anybody in the county.

Stillwater.

Now that the prospects of the new railroad are quite certain, all our enterprising citizens are rejoicing.

Farmers are busy with their spring crops. The few warm days past has started vegetation, and everything in nature is putting on an appearance of new life, except the countenances of sundry husbands—house-cleaning, you know!

A nine year old boy, A. J. M. Fritz, son of Mr. Daniel Fritz, caught, on April 25th, two trout, one 12 inches and the other 14½ inches in length; the largest weighed 1½ lbs. Old fisherman, yield the palm to young America!

Country stores are doing a great injury in the sale of certain slops called "bottled beer," to young boys. It begets in them the habit of treating, which paves the way for stronger drink. Boys, cold water is a much safer, healthier and economical drink. Merchants, take notice! What is a few pennies in your pocket compared with the bad influence on the boys of your neigborhood? I write this at the solicitude of a number of anxious parents.

Mr. O. D. Hagenbaugh is erecting a fine stable on his lot, a much needed improvement.

Dr. McHenry of Benton, is erecting a fine store house. He intends engaging in the drug business.

There is to be an immersion at Benton next Sunday after the morning services, by the pastor of the Christian church.

"The true friend is not he who holds up Flattery's mirror,
In which the face to thy conceit most pleasing honors;
But he who kindly shows thee all thy vices, Sirah!

Centralia.

A most distressing and painful accident occurred at Centralia colliery on Thursday of last week to a young man named Burns. He was employed as a car loader, and was in the act of running cars under the breaker when his foot slipped between the bumpers, and before he could regain his footing the cars came together, mashing his leg from the knee to the ankle. He was taken to the Miners' Hospital where the limb was amputated. He was the only support of a widowed mother and seven sisters, one of whom is at the point of death.

Lawrence Burns was injured about the face and head by a blast, at the Hazel Dell colliery last week. He lit a shot, and thinking it missed fire, went back to relight it when it went off, injuring Burns as above stated.

Young America and a Polander started a quarrel at Riley & Co's. store a few days ago, which brought several of our prominent men into a law suit. We would like to give a detailed account of the affair, but owing to the ungentlemanly manner in which one of the participants used a woman we will have nothing more to say on the subject, though we would advise clerks not to be "too previous" in taking a hand.

The Temperance Association held a ball on Friday evening in the township school house, which was conducted in a very creditable manner, and was a financial success. The object of the ball was to replenish the funds of the society.

Patrick Tarpey, who has been farming in Minnesota for the past eight years, brought his family to town last week. As he has been in ill health for some time he was unable to follow his occupation.

A large crowd of boys congregated around the Hungarian quarters in Freck's patch on Saturday evening and sent a shower of stones on the poor wretches, which made them wish they were in Hungary or some other foreign port. The Chief Burgess appeared on the scene shortly afterward and put a stop to the stone throwing. One of the Hungarians received a very ugly cut above the eye.

Isaac Dudrey, while dressing timber at the Morris Ridge colliery, struck his foot with an adz, inflicting a deep gash in his instep.

A Polander had two fingers taken off by a rail falling on them, in Morris Ridge slope on Monday.

John McDonough was given a hearing before Esquire Murphy on Monday evening, for striking a Polander with a piece of coal in the mines. The young man was compelled to pay a fine and costs.

The brown-stone steps in front of Curry's hotel present a fine appearance.

Proposals are being received by the Street Committee for macadamizing Centre street from the railroad to the church. This is something badly needed, and we hope it will be pushed rapidly ahead.

The contractors have laid the water pipes as far as the church. Now, what we need to make the people in that part of town smile is a connection with the Brush Valley reservoir.

The airhole at Morris Ridge was completed last week, and good ventilation is the result.

Hotel-de-Sheara received a general overhauling last week, and looks well with a slate roof. Better build a basement Mary, or it will topple over.

The building boom has fairly started in town, no less than fifteen houses being in the course of erection.

Berwick.

During the absence of the gentlemanly operator of the Western Union Telegraph, Mr. J. C. Kunkle who has been visiting at his home in Carlisle, the business of the office has been conducted by Mr. Zelnder's clerks, Messrs. Witman and Lowrey.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Silkman we regret to learn will leave Berwick to take up their permanent residence on their place Maplewood near Scranton. The genial couple will be greatly missed by their large circle of friencs.

Col. A. D. Seely recently received a life sized oil painting of himself in full G. A. R. uniform, which is a fine specimen of artistic execution and is the work of Mr. Gable of Reading. It is handsomely framed in fretted bronze and makes an attractive ornament to the parlor of the Colonel's cosy home.

Pay day passed off rather quietly with the exception of one or two slight misunderstandings in the evening.

A large force of men are at work on the Fair grounds of the "Upper Columbia and Lower Luzerne County Fair Association." The ground covers an area of 20 acres, circled by a track sixty feet wide and one-half mile long, laid out according to the rules of the "National Trotting Association." The location is not more than ten minutes walk from the centre of the town, and will make a very desirable site for the purposes for which it is intended.

The crops around here and Briarcreek look very promising and we were pleased to note signs of progress and improvement in the last named place. Mr. Rittenhouse has made some good improvements, and Mr. Learn contemplates similar ones on his premises, Ash Bros. Mill is in full operation. Some dissatisfaction is felt in the neighborhood owing to the fact that Mr. Seth Thomas is moving his fence out into the lane leading from the main road to the Croup place. It is stated that the road has stood at its present width for over twenty years and it seems strange that Mr. T. should only recently have discovered that he owned the right to abridge it. If it is reduced to the width contemplated it will be a dangerous road for teamsters or pedestrians to travel as it crosses the R. R. and in case of freight it would be impossible to avoid collision if two vehicles happened to be in the road at the same time. We understand that proceedings are being taken to retain the road in its normal condition.

Mr. J. H. Brugler of Danville, Montour county (a former resident of Berwick) is out as a candidate for the office of prothonotary of that county at the request of many of its leading citizens. Mr. Brugler is a gentleman of unquestioned ability and courteous manners, and we hope our neighbors will elect him to the office, as he will certainly prove worthy and efficient in the performance of its duties.

Mrs. Lizzie Jackson of Berwick, Miss Helen Jamison of Danville, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Seybert of Philadelphia returned last week from an extended trip through Florida, Georgia and the South Atlantic States. They report a pleasant and enjoyable trip through that genial and tropical region and are greatly improved in health. Their many friends welcome them back to the Keystone State.

Our former townsman Mr. T. B. Bradford of Sunbury, is now engaged in the wholesale shoe trade representing the well known firm of Stone, Goff & Co of Binghampton. We are glad to hear that Mr. B. is making a success in his undertaking. He has many friends in Berwick who will always be glad to hear of his well doing.

From authentic information we learn that Berwick is to be left without light during the present year. The progressive councils of the past years placed street lamps at the most desirable locations but our present economical borough dads will not appropriate funds for their utilization. What does the Bible say about "men who loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil."

Mr. Isaiah Bower's new store corner of 2d and Pine is a model of neatness and we trust will command a large share of the public patronage.

Squire John Jacoby has rented the office and is now prepared to transact such business as pertains to his office together with collections and general business negotiations.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Jackson is undergoing a thorough renovation and the old homestead will be made unusually snug and attractive when finished.

Mr. F. W. Stiles of Ulysses Nebraska is visiting this place, his former home, and expects to remain with us for a few days.

A brand new secretary of Y. M. C. A. is to be imported this week for the better prosecution of their work. There is plenty of room for such work if it is honest, manly, Christian work, but if it is run in the future as it has been run in the past on a "Pecksmiff" basis it would be better for all concerned to abandon the work. Berwick people are very keen in discriminating between religion and sham.

State Secretary Taggart of the Y. M. C. A. is here looking after the interests of the Berwick Association.

Mr. Frank Witman left on Wednesday for Montrose where he is to become private secretary to Mr. C. R. Woodin.

Dr. J. P. Coult our popular dentist left this week to take up his permanent residence in Scranton, where he will continue to practice his profession. We wish him abundance of success.

An interesting lecture on the subject of "What is Odd Fellowship?" was given in the Odd Fellows' hall by Mr. G. A. Buckingham, on Saturday last, the occasion being the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship in America. The lecture was a very appropriate one and was treated in a full and intelligent manner. The attendance was good and the audience was appreciative.

Dear Sir—I lay on my side for four long months without any relief until I commenced taking Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir. It is the best medicine I ever used. To-day is the best day I have seen in twelve months. I thank you and God Almighty and no one else for my relief. I have lived and done public business in Geneva, N. Y., for the last twenty, therefore have many acquaintances that call around and see me daily and to ask about Phelps' Elixir for themselves or for some of their friends. I praise it highly. In numberless bulbs beneath the skin is secreted the liquid substance which gives the hair its texture, color and gloss. When this secretion stops, the hair begins at once to become dry, lustreless, brittle and gray. Is that the condition of your hair? If so, apply Parker's Hair Balsam at once. It will restore the color, gloss and life by renewing the action of nature. The Balsam is not an oil, not a dye, but an elegant toilet article, highly appreciated because of its cleanliness.

DR. ELLIS AND BIBLE WINE.

Alfred Speer, whose salesroom is at 16 Warren Street, New York, has large Vineyards near Passaic, N. J., is extensively engaged in preserving Unfermented Juice from the Oporto Grapes and supplies it to many religious societies for Communion purposes. The following is from Dr. John Ellis, who has written several works on Bible wine: "The writer obtained from Mr. Speer, a bottle of his unfermented Wine in February, 1883, and found it a very pleasant and nutritious wine. Mr. W. J. Parsons and the writer put a portion of this wine into a retort and distilled and condensed about one-third of the contents of the retort. The distilled had neither the smell nor taste of alcohol, nor did chemical tests indicate any taste of alcohol.

Here then we have an unfermented wine actually in the market which the writer thinks is far more palatable than fermented wine and is unpolluted by leaven." Many religious societies are using this wine.

See a woman in another column, near Speer's Vineyards, picking grapes from which Speer's Port Grape Wine is made, that is so highly esteemed by the medical profession, for the use of invalids, weakly persons and the aged.

An Army Experience.

HOW AN OLD VETERAN ESCAPED ANNIHILATION AND LIVED TO IMPART A WARNING TO OTHERS.

(National Tribune of Washington.)

A pleasing occurrence which has just come to our notice in connection with the New York state meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic is so unusual in many respects that we venture to produce it for the benefit of our readers.

Captain Alfred Rensom, of New York, while pacing in the lobby of the armory, previous to one of the meetings, suddenly stopped and scanned the face of a gentleman who was in earnest conversation with one of the Grand Army officers. It seemed to him that he had seen that face before, partially obscured by the smoke of battle, and yet this bright and pleasant countenance could not be the same pale, and death-like visage, which he so dimly remembered. But the recollection, like Banquo's ghost, would not "down" at command and haunted him the entire day. On the day following he again saw the same countenance, and ventured to speak to its owner. The instant the two veterans heard each other's voices, that instant they recognized and called each other by name. Their faces and forms had changed, but their voices were the same. The man whom Captain Rensom had recognized was Mr. W. K. Sage, of St Johns, Mich., a veteran of the 23d N. Y. Light Artillery and both members of Burnside's famous expedition to North Carolina. After the first greetings were over, Captain Rensom said:

"It hardly seems possible, Sage, to see you in this condition, for I thought you must have been dead long ago."

"Yes, I do not doubt it, for if I am not mistaken, when we last met I was occupying a couch in the hospital, a victim of 'Yellow Jack' in its worst form."

"I remember. The war seems to have caused more misery since its close than when it was in progress," replied the Captain. "I meet old comrades frequently who are suffering terribly, not so much from old wounds as from the malarial poisons which ruined their constitutions."

"I think so myself. When the war closed I returned home and at times I feel well, but every few weeks that confounded 'all-gone' feeling would come upon me again. My nervous system, which was shattered in the service, failed me entirely and produced one of the worst possible cases of nervous dyspepsia. Most of the time I had no appetite; then again I would become ravenously hungry, but the minute I sat down to eat I loathed food. My skin was dry and parched, my flesh loose and flabby. I could hold nothing on my stomach for days at a time, and what little I did eat failed to assimilate. I was easily fatigued; my mind was depressed; I was cross and irritable and many a night my heart would pain me so I could not sleep, and when I did I had horrid dreams and frightful nightmares. Of course, these things came on one by one, worse than the other. My breath was foul, my tongue was coated, my teeth decayed. I had terrific headaches which would leave my nervous system completely shattered. In fact my existence, since the war, has been a living death, from which I have often prayed for release."

"Couldn't the old surgeon do you any good?"

"I wrote him and he treated me, but like every other doctor, failed. They all said my nerve was gone and without that to build upon I could not get well. When I was at my worst, piles of the severest nature came upon me. Then my liver gave out and without the use of catharics I could not move my bowels at all. My blood got like a stream of fire and seemed literally to burn me alive."

"Well you might better have died in battle, quick and without ceremony."

"How many times I have wished I had died the day we captured Newberne!"

"And yet you are now the picture of health."

"And the picture is taken from life. I am in perfect condition. My nerve tone is restored; my stomach reinvigorated; my flesh is hard and healthy; in fact I have new blood, new energy and a new lease of life wholly as the result of using Warner's Tippecanoe. This remarkable preparation, which I consider the finest tonic and stomach restorer in the world has overcome all the evil influences of malaria, all the poison of the army, all traces of dyspepsia, all mal assimilation of food, and indeed made a new man of me."

The Captain remained silent for a while evidently musing over his recollections of the past. When he again raised his head he said:

"It would be a godsend if all the veterans who have suffered so intensely and also all others in the land who are enduring so much misery could know of your experience, Sage, and the way by which you have been restored."

And that is why the above conversation is recounted.

Planting Corn in Drills.

At one time it looked as if the planting of Indian corn in drills would be generally adopted, as it appeared to increase for several years; but lately, say within the last five or six years, it has lost its growing prominence, and farmers are inclining the hill method again. It is not doubted that a little better yield can be obtained from drilling but not enough to pay for the increased labor which it requires. And this is the drawback, and will always be in the way of its general substitution. There are now machines invented to place the seed in hills as well as in drills, which favors the hill system. Indian corn is one of the great staples of this country. As food for man and beast it surpasses all others combined. Yet, until within the last few years, the labor bestowed upon its cultivation was never as thorough as its importance demanded. Formerly the care given it seemed to be grudged. The soil was allowed to remain in lumps, and the grass and weeds to smother the young plants. Now all this has been changed. A corn field is cultivated with all the attention of a garden, and the yield per acre is a third to a half greater than twenty to thirty years ago.

As to the cornfodder, we have always thought that not nearly as much care was bestowed upon it as its value merited. There is nothing easier to cure, and there is no food that cattle like better through the winter. If in good order, which we repeat is not often the case, they prefer it to the best hay usually fed by them, and thrive well upon it. And if cut into inch pieces and lightly steamed, and mixed with a little bran or cotton seed, it is a valuable food.

Reviving Fruit Trees.

Mr. D. S. Pratt writes to the American Institute Farmers' Club about the care of fruit trees as follows: "Remembering Prof. Liebig's theory that when a vegetable is burned the part which came from the air in the process of its growth returns to the atmosphere, and the part which came from the ground is reduced to ashes, I came to the conclusion that ashes would be beneficial when applied to the roots of the trees. They were standing in the soil strongly inclined to clay, with a turf around them that had not been removed for several years. After pruning them properly, removing every indication of worms, etc., and washing the body and branches with soapsuds, I began operations below, first removing the turf two feet around the tree, then with a garden pick the ground was loosened from six to twelve inches in depth, taking care not to injure the larger roots. Twenty or thirty quarts of loose dirt were removed, leaving a large cavity, shaped like a saucer, with the tree standing in the centre. About one pint of unbleached ashes was sprinkled about the tree, and upon this chip manure was placed, nearly filling the cavity. Another pint of ashes was sprinkled upon the fertilizer, which was gently pressed down, and the hole covered with the loose dirt taken from the cavity, leaving the surface nearly as it was, excepting the turf. A young orchard was treated in a similar way. The effect was wonderful. Plum trees that were going to the bad revived. Peach trees that had presented small and shrivelled leaves threw out luxuriant foliage, and cherry trees gave fruit larger and fairer than ever before."

Utilizing Bone.

Among the waste materials on the farm there are few, if any, that are richer in one of the most important elements of plant food than bones, when made soluble in water. Just how to do this in the cheapest and at the same time the best manner, is a question that is frequently answered by the farmer, and is so often asked by those who have no practical knowledge of the matter, that the farmer is frequently misled, and spends so much time to no purpose, that he becomes discouraged and sells the waste bones of the farm at a very low price, or neglects altogether to pick them up.

The simplest and cheapest way to reduce bones to make them available for plant food, is to burn them; but to do this is a great loss of plant food, as it consumes all of the nitrogen; yet the ashes is very rich in phosphate, being about 80 per cent. It also contains 16 per cent. of carbonate of lime, 2 or 3 per cent, of phosphate of magnesia, soda, and potash. All of these substances are indispensable to vegetable growth. The process of burning bones is so simple that some contend that when only small quantities are to be reduced it is the best way, even though the nitrogen be lost. It would certainly be better to burn them than to sell them for a half a cent, or even a cent a pound. It is very poor policy for the farmer to sell the bones from the farm; in fact, when he can buy at less than a cent a pound he had better buy what he can, though he have to resort to burning them to make them available for plant food; but as this is a wasteful process, the ashes should be resorted to when they can be readily obtained. In some portions of the State small establishments have been erected to steam and grind bones. By extracting the grease and gelatin the bones are easily ground; this leaves in the bone about one-half of the nitrogen, the other half may be saved by composting the liquid with dry muck. Some of the owners of these mills are willing to steam and grind bones for a fair consideration. When such mills can be found within a reasonable distance, this is the best way to get a small, or even a large lot of bones worked up into plant food.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

BAD BREATH.—This most disagreeable infliction may be alleviated or cured by the following remedy, provided the teeth do not require the dentist's assistance: Chlorine water as supplied by a good chemist, a teaspoonful to a half tumbler of water, to be used as a wash and gargle for the mouth; no harm will be done if a few drops are accidentally swallowed in so doing. Charcoal in teaspoonful doses of the power, or as charcoal biscuits, or the use of prepared chalk as a tooth powder. A frequent cause of foul breath is the torpidity of some of the excretory organs, such as the skin, kidneys, bowels, liver or lungs. When these cease performing their functions one of the others will be called upon to perform an extra office. In this way when the bowels or skin become affected, the lungs being an excretory organ, will be called upon to throw off an additional waste from the system, If so, the breath becomes tainted. Should the foul breath be depending upon the stomach, it must be corrected by some skillful physician.

A boy found a woman's switch in the opera house and returned it to her. "Thank you, my little man," said the lady, you are an honest boy." Oh, no, I'm not so very honest, but I know what I am." "What are you, then?" "A hair restorer."
